Once upon a time, in a place not very far away
and not so very long ago. . . in fact, it happened just last week, in the big pink house down
the road. You know the one?

The house opposite the bakery that makes those amazing cupcakes? Next to the Flower Shop?

Anyway, last week Miss Positive Pants was sitting in the sun enjoying a nice cup of chamomile tea.

Suddenly, a bright flash of orange fur with green eyes raced across the garden and landed on her lap, sending Miss Positive Pants' tea flying.

Straightening her glasses she exclaimed, "Jenga!
What are you doing? Can't you see I'm trying to relax?"

"Meow," replied a very annoyed looking Jenga, who turned so Miss Positive Pants could see who was on her fluffy orange back.

“Crayons! What on earth are you doing?
Poor Jenga!” Exclaimed Miss Positive Pants as she picked off the magic crayons and put them on the table.

The crayons looked down bashfully, “We’re sorry for the mess, Miss Positive Pants.
It’s just that we have a problem only you can fix.

We want to create new pictures to share with the Little Doodlers, but just look at us! We need to be sharpened, but we don’t want to get any shorter!”

Miss Positive Pants thought carefully, humming to herself,
“This sounds like a job for my Positive Pants!”
and with that she whisked away to her bedroom to change.

When she came back wearing her positive pants
her eyes shone with excitement.

“I have the perfect solution you silly crayons!
A fantastic way to show you that everybody changes –
let me show you how great it can be!”

Miss Positive Pants scooped up the crayons and carried them to her desk. She opened her computer and picked some of her favourite pictures that the Little Doodlers had drawn. She shared them with artists all over the world.

“Just wait and see, crayons – I’ve asked the artists to imagine these beautiful ideas in their own way and to share them with us”.

And so the crayons waited.

The more images they saw, the more excited they became to help the Little Doodlers colour them in.

One day, the magic crayons went to Miss Positive Pants to see if she had more doodles. She surprised them with a book – all ready to be coloured in.
The crayons jumped up and down with excitement !

Miss Positive Pants laughed, “But you’ll have to be sharpened, and that means you will be just a little bit shorter!”

“That’s okay”, replied the crayons, “we’re not worried anymore.
These beautiful pictures have shown us its okay to change,
as long as you stay true to who you are!

We may end up a little shorter but we will be more special because we helped bring more colour to the world,
and that’s important work!”

And with that the crayons ran off to share their colours with the Little Doodlers.

The End.
